Understanding Chicago Style Citation Systems

The Chicago Manual of Style offers two distinct citation systems, each serving different academic and publication needs. The choice between them significantly impacts how your reference list will appear. It is imperative to know which system your institution or publisher requires before you begin compiling your citations.

The Notes-Bibliography System

This system is prevalent in the humanities, including literature, history, and the arts. It utilizes footnotes or endnotes to cite sources within the text. Consequently, the reference list, typically titled "Bibliography," includes all sources cited in the notes, often in a slightly more detailed format than the initial note. The bibliography is usually arranged alphabetically by author's last name.

The Author-Date System

The author-date system, common in the social sciences and natural sciences, uses parenthetical in-text citations that include the author's last name and the year of publication (e.g., Smith 2020). The reference list, often titled "Reference List," provides full bibliographic details for each source cited in the text, also organized alphabetically. This system allows readers to quickly identify the source and publication date directly within the narrative.

Core Elements of a Chicago Style Reference List Entry

Regardless of the chosen system, a Chicago-style reference list entry for any source type shares several fundamental components. These elements work together to provide a complete bibliographic record, enabling readers to find the original source. Familiarity with these building blocks is essential for constructing accurate citations.

Author(s)

The author's name is typically the first element in a Chicago citation. For the notes-bibliography system, the author's name is presented as Last Name, First Name. In the author-date system, it's also Last Name, First Name. If there are multiple authors, specific rules apply regarding how their names are listed, usually involving "and" before the last author's name.

Title of the Work

The title of the specific work being cited (e.g., book, article, chapter) is a crucial component. Titles of standalone works like books are italicized. Titles of shorter works published within a larger work, such as journal articles or chapters, are typically enclosed in quotation marks.

Publication Information

This includes essential details about where and when the work was published. For books, this typically involves the place of publication, the publisher's name, and the year of publication. For journal articles, it includes the journal title (italicized), volume number, issue number, and the page range of the article. Online resources will include the website name and the URL.

Page Numbers (when applicable)

For sources where you are referencing a specific part of the work, such as a direct quote or a paraphrase from a book or article, you will include the relevant page number(s) in your in-text citation. These are not always included in the bibliography entry itself unless referring to a specific edition or if it's the only way to identify the material.

Chicago Style Examples for Books

Books are among the most common sources encountered in academic writing. Chicago style provides clear guidelines for citing them, whether in print or digital formats. Paying close attention to the order and punctuation of these elements ensures accuracy.

A Single-Author Book

This is a foundational example for citing a book. Note the order of the author's name and the use of italics for the book title.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Smith, John. The History of Chicago. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2020.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Smith, John. 2020. The History of Chicago. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

A Book with Two or Three Authors

When a book has multiple authors, Chicago style has specific rules for how their names are presented in the reference list.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Adams, Jane, and Robert Green. Modern Urban Planning. New York: Academic Press, 2019.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Adams, Jane, and Robert Green. 2019. Modern Urban Planning. New York: Academic Press.

A Book with More Than Three Authors

For books with four or more authors, the convention is to list the first author followed by "et al." (an abbreviation for "and others").

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Brown, Sarah, et al. Theories of Social Change. London: Routledge, 2018.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Brown, Sarah, et al. 2018. Theories of Social Change. London: Routledge.

An Edited Book

When citing an entire edited book, the editor(s) are listed, often with an abbreviation indicating their role.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Davis, Michael, ed. Essays on American Literature. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2021.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Davis, Michael, ed. 2021. Essays on American Literature. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt.

A Chapter or Part of an Edited Book

Citing a specific contribution within an edited volume requires citing both the author of the chapter and the details of the larger work.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Williams, Emily. "Thematic Analysis in Modern Fiction." In Essays on American Literature, edited by Michael Davis, 45-68. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2021.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Williams, Emily. 2021. "Thematic Analysis in Modern Fiction." In Essays on American Literature, edited by Michael Davis, 45-68. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt.

Chicago Style Examples for Journal Articles

Journal articles are vital for current research and scholarly discourse. Citing them accurately in Chicago style ensures you give proper credit to the original authors and allows readers to find these often-accessed resources.

A Journal Article with a DOI

Digital Object Identifiers (DOIs) are persistent links to scholarly articles. Their inclusion is standard practice.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Johnson, David. "Renewable Energy Trends in Urban Environments." Journal of Sustainable Development 25, no. 2 (2022): 112-130. doi:10.1080/12345678.2022.987654.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Johnson, David. 2022. "Renewable Energy Trends in Urban Environments." Journal of Sustainable Development 25 (2): 112-130. doi:10.1080/12345678.2022.987654.

A Journal Article without a DOI (Accessed Online)

When a DOI is not available, the URL of the article, along with the access date, is typically provided.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Miller, Sarah. "The Impact of Social Media on Political Discourse." Communications Quarterly 30, no. 1 (2021): 55-70. Accessed July 15, 2023.
<https://www.examplejournal.com/article/12345>.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Miller, Sarah. 2021. "The Impact of Social Media on Political Discourse." Communications Quarterly 30 (1): 55-70. Accessed July 15, 2023.
<https://www.examplejournal.com/article/12345>.

A Journal Article from a Print Subscription Database

When the article is accessed through a subscription database and lacks a DOI, the database name and accession number might be included.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Garcia, Maria. "Early Childhood Education Models." Educational Review 45, no. 3 (2019): 210-225. ProQuest Central, Document ID: 123456789.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Garcia, Maria. 2019. "Early Childhood Education Models." Educational Review 45 (3): 210-225. ProQuest Central, Document ID: 123456789.

Chicago Style Examples for Websites and Online Resources

The internet has become a vast repository of information. Citing online sources requires careful attention to detail, including the website name, author (if available), title, publication date, and URL.

A Webpage with an Author

When a specific author is credited for the content of a webpage, their name should be included.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Lee, Kevin. "Understanding Artificial Intelligence." Tech Insights Blog, March 10, 2023. <https://www.techinsights.com/ai-explained>.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Lee, Kevin. 2023. "Understanding Artificial Intelligence." Tech Insights Blog, March 10. <https://www.techinsights.com/ai-explained>.

A Webpage without a Specific Author (Corporate Author)

If no individual author is listed, the organization or corporation responsible for the website acts as the author.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- World Health Organization. "Global Health Statistics Report 2022." Accessed July 15, 2023. <https://www.who.int/reports/global-health-2022>.

- Author-Date System Example:

- World Health Organization. 2022. "Global Health Statistics Report 2022." Accessed July 15, 2023. <https://www.who.int/reports/global-health-2022>.

A Blog Post

Blog posts are cited similarly to other webpages, with emphasis on the author, post title, blog name, and date.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Patel, Priya. "The Future of Remote Work." Career Development Insights, April 5, 2023. <https://www.careerinsights.com/remote-work-future>.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Patel, Priya. 2023. "The Future of Remote Work." Career Development Insights, April 5. <https://www.careerinsights.com/remote-work-future>.

Chicago Style Examples for Other Source Types

Beyond books and articles, Chicago style provides guidance for a wide array of other sources, ensuring consistency across diverse research materials. These include reports, government documents, and media.

A Government Report

Government publications are often cited by the agency that issued them.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- United States. Environmental Protection Agency. Annual Air Quality Report. Washington, DC: Government Publishing Office, 2021.

- Author-Date System Example:

- United States. Environmental Protection Agency. 2021. Annual Air Quality Report. Washington, DC: Government Publishing Office.

A Newspaper Article

Newspaper articles are cited with the author (if known), article title, newspaper name, and date.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- Thompson, Laura. "Local Businesses Adapt to Economic Shifts." Chicago Tribune, July 10, 2023.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Thompson, Laura. 2023. "Local Businesses Adapt to Economic Shifts." Chicago Tribune, July 10.

A Film or Television Episode

Citations for audiovisual materials include title, director/creator, and production details.

- Notes-Bibliography System Example:

- The Great Gatsby. Directed by Baz Luhrmann. Warner Bros. Pictures, 2013.

- Author-Date System Example:

- Luhrmann, Baz, dir. 2013. The Great Gatsby. Warner Bros. Pictures.

Formatting Your Reference List in Chicago Style

Beyond the individual entries, the overall presentation of your reference list is crucial for adherence to Chicago style. Proper formatting enhances readability and professionalism.

Alphabetical Order

All entries in your reference list, whether for the notes-bibliography or author-date system, must be arranged in alphabetical order based on the first word of each entry, typically the author's last name. If an entry has no author, it is alphabetized by the title.

Hanging Indentation

Chicago style consistently employs a hanging indent for reference lists. This means the first line of each entry is flush with the left margin, and all subsequent lines of that entry are indented. This formatting makes it easier for readers to distinguish between entries and locate specific citations quickly.

Double-Spacing

Reference lists in Chicago style are typically double-spaced, both within and between entries. This spacing contributes to a clean and readable layout, which is a hallmark of professional academic documents. Ensure your word processing software is set to double-spacing for the entire reference list section.

Adhering to these formatting conventions, alongside the detailed examples provided, will ensure your Chicago-style reference list is accurate, complete, and professional. This meticulous attention to detail is fundamental to scholarly communication and upholds the integrity of your research.

FAQ: Chicago Style Examples for Reference List

Q: What is the primary difference between the notes-bibliography and author-date systems in Chicago style for reference lists?

A: The notes-bibliography system uses footnotes or endnotes in the text and a bibliography at the end, which often includes all sources consulted, not just those cited. The author-date system uses in-text parenthetical citations (Author Year) and a reference list that includes only the sources cited in the text.

Q: How do I cite a book with an editor but no author in a Chicago style reference list?

A: For the notes-bibliography system, you would list the editor's name followed by "ed." or "eds.", then the title, publication information, and page range if applicable (e.g., Davis, Michael, ed. Essays on American Literature. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2021.). For the author-date system, it would be similar: Davis, Michael, ed. 2021. Essays on American Literature. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt.

Q: What is the correct way to cite a website that has no clear author or publication date in Chicago style?

A: If there is no author, use the name of the organization or website as the author. If there is no publication date, use "n.d." (for "no date"). Include the access date and the URL (e.g., World Health Organization. "Global Health Statistics Report." n.d. Accessed July 15, 2023. <https://www.who.int/reports/global-health-statistics>.).

Q: How should I format the reference list for a journal article with multiple authors in Chicago style?

A: For two or three authors, list them all in the reference list (e.g., Adams, Jane, and Robert Green.). For four or more authors, list the first author followed by "et al." (e.g., Brown, Sarah, et al.). The order remains the same for both notes-bibliography and author-date systems.

Q: Does Chicago style require specific formatting for DOIs (Digital Object Identifiers) in reference list entries?

A: Yes, DOIs are typically included at the end of the entry, preceded by "doi:" followed by the identifier itself. They are often presented as a clickable hyperlink if the document is intended for digital viewing, but the essential element is the DOI string.

Q: What is the purpose of a hanging indent in a Chicago style reference list?

A: A hanging indent (where the first line of each entry is flush left and subsequent lines are indented) is used to improve readability. It clearly distinguishes between separate entries and makes it easier for readers to scan the list and locate specific citations by author.

Q: When citing a newspaper article, is it necessary to include the page numbers in the reference list entry?

A: For print newspaper articles, it is often helpful to include page numbers if they are available, especially if the article is long or spans multiple pages. However, for online newspaper articles, the URL is more critical than page numbers.

Q: How do I cite a chapter from an edited book when using the author-date system?

A: For the author-date system, you would cite the chapter author, the year, the chapter title, the word "In" followed by the book title, the editor(s), and then the page range of the chapter, along with the publication information for the book (e.g., Williams, Emily. 2021. "Thematic Analysis in Modern Fiction." In Essays on American Literature, edited by Michael Davis, 45-68. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt.).
