Understanding the Chicago Manual of Style

The Chicago Manual of Style (CMOS) is a widely respected and comprehensive style guide that provides detailed instructions on writing, citing, and formatting academic papers. Published by the University of Chicago Press, it offers guidance on grammar, punctuation, manuscript preparation, and, most importantly for students, citation. Its flexibility makes it adaptable to various academic fields, particularly in the humanities and social sciences, though its principles are broadly applicable.

CMOS is known for its detailed approach, covering everything from the proper use of apostrophes to the intricate requirements of citing a diverse range of sources. For students, mastering Chicago style is not just about adhering to rules; it's about learning to present research and ideas clearly, accurately, and ethically. This involves understanding how to properly attribute sources to avoid plagiarism and how to structure a paper for maximum readability and impact.

When to Use Chicago Style

The decision to use Chicago style often depends on the specific academic discipline, the institution, or even the individual professor's preference. While traditionally strong in history, literature, and the arts, its influence extends to sociology, anthropology, and religious studies. Many universities and journals within these fields mandate or recommend the use of CMOS for its thoroughness and clarity.

Students should always check their course syllabi or consult with their instructors to confirm which citation style is required. If Chicago style is specified, it's essential to understand which of its two primary systems will be used, as this significantly impacts how sources are cited within the text and in the bibliography or reference list.

The Two Chicago Citation Systems: Notes-Bibliography vs. Author-Date

Chicago style offers two distinct systems for in-text citation, each serving different scholarly conventions. The first, the notes-bibliography system, is prevalent in the humanities. The second, the author-date system, is more common in the sciences and social sciences. Understanding the fundamental differences is key to applying either system correctly.

The notes-bibliography system uses numbered footnotes or endnotes to cite sources directly within the text, with a corresponding bibliography at the end of the paper listing all sources consulted. The author-date system uses parenthetical citations within the text, typically consisting of the author's last name and the year of publication, and a reference list at the end. Students must be aware of which system they are expected to use for their assignments.

Chicago Style Student Examples: Notes-Bibliography System

The notes-bibliography system is characterized by the use of superscript numbers placed after the relevant information in the text. These numbers correspond to a note (either a footnote at the bottom of the page or an endnote at the end of the paper) that provides the full citation details. A comprehensive bibliography then lists all sources cited in the notes, alphabetized by author's last name.

Footnotes/Endnotes in Notes-Bibliography System

When a student first cites a source in a note, the citation is usually in a more complete format. Subsequent citations of the same source are typically shortened. Here are some common examples:

- First Note for a Book: ¹ Michel Foucault, Discipline and Punish: The Birth of the Prison, trans. Alan Sheridan (New York: Vintage Books, 1995), 23.
- Subsequent Note for the Same Book: ² Foucault, Discipline and Punish, 78.
- First Note for a Journal Article: ³ Judith Butler, "Performative Acts and Gender Constitution: An Essay in Phenomenology and Feminist Theory," Theatre Journal 40, no. 4 (1988): 525.

- Subsequent Note for the Same Journal Article: ⁴ Butler, "Performative Acts," 530.
- Note for a Website: ⁵ National Park Service, "History of the Statue of Liberty," accessed October 26, 2023, <https://www.nps.gov/stli/learn/historyculture/statue-history.htm>.

Bibliography in Notes-Bibliography System

The bibliography is an alphabetized list of all sources cited in the notes. The format for bibliography entries differs slightly from footnotes/endnotes, particularly in punctuation and the order of elements. Here are corresponding examples:

- Foucault, Michel. Discipline and Punish: The Birth of the Prison. Translated by Alan Sheridan. New York: Vintage Books, 1995.
- Butler, Judith. "Performative Acts and Gender Constitution: An Essay in Phenomenology and Feminist Theory." Theatre Journal 40, no. 4 (1988): 519-31.
- National Park Service. "History of the Statue of Liberty." Accessed October 26, 2023. <https://www.nps.gov/stli/learn/historyculture/statue-history.htm>.

Chicago Style Student Examples: Author-Date System

In the author-date system, sources are cited directly within the text using parenthetical references. These typically include the author's last name and the year of publication, often followed by a page number if a specific part of the source is being referenced. A reference list at the end of the paper contains full bibliographic information for all sources cited.

In-Text Citations in Author-Date System

In-text citations are concise and aim to direct the reader to the full entry in the reference list. Page numbers are crucial for direct quotations or paraphrased specific ideas.

- Citation for a Book: (Foucault 1995, 23)
- Citation for a Journal Article: (Butler 1988, 525)
- Citation for a Website: (National Park Service, n.d.) - "n.d." is used if no publication date is available.

When the author's name is part of the sentence, only the year and page number (if applicable) are needed in parentheses.

- Foucault argues that the prison system emerged as a disciplinary mechanism (1995, 78).
- According to Butler, gender constitution is a performative act (1988, 530).

Reference List in Author-Date System

The reference list is an alphabetized compilation of all sources cited in the text. The format for each entry is similar to that of the bibliography in the notes-bibliography system, but the order of elements might vary slightly depending on the source type.

- Foucault, Michel. 1995. Discipline and Punish: The Birth of the Prison. Translated by Alan Sheridan. New York: Vintage Books.
- Butler, Judith. 1988. "Performative Acts and Gender Constitution: An Essay in Phenomenology and Feminist Theory." Theatre Journal 40 (4): 519–31.
- National Park Service. n.d. "History of the Statue of Liberty." Accessed October 26, 2023. <https://www.nps.gov/stli/learn/historyculture/statue-history.htm>.

Formatting Your Paper in Chicago Style

Beyond citations, Chicago style also dictates specific formatting guidelines for academic papers to ensure consistency and professionalism. These include margins, font choices, spacing, and the presentation of headings and other structural elements.

General Formatting Requirements

Adhering to standard formatting guidelines makes a paper easier to read and navigate. For most student papers, the following are recommended:

- Margins: 1-inch margins on all sides.
- Font: A readable, standard font such as Times New Roman or Arial, usually in 12-point size.
- Spacing: Double-spacing throughout the entire document, including block quotations and the bibliography/reference list.
- Page Numbers: Typically placed in the upper right-hand corner of each page,

- Title Page: While not always required by CMOS, many instructors prefer a title page with the paper's title, the student's name, the course name, the instructor's name, and the date.

Headings and Subheadings

Chicago style provides guidance on how to structure papers using headings and subheadings to organize content logically. The specific styling can vary, but generally, major sections are clearly delineated.

- Main Sections: Often centered or left-aligned, sometimes in bold or all caps, depending on preference and context.
- Subheadings: Usually left-aligned, in a smaller font or different weight (e.g., bold italic), and used to break down main sections into smaller, manageable topics.

The goal is to create a clear hierarchy of information that guides the reader through the argument or analysis presented in the paper.

Common Source Types and Their Chicago Style Examples

Students will encounter a wide variety of sources, and Chicago style provides specific formats for each. Mastery of these formats is essential for accurate and complete citations.

Books

Whether a single-author book, an edited volume, or a book with multiple authors, the core elements remain similar.

- Single Author Book (Notes-Bibliography): ¹ Edward Said, Orientalism (New York: Pantheon Books, 1978), 49.
- Single Author Book (Bibliography): Said, Edward. Orientalism. New York: Pantheon Books, 1978.
- Edited Book (Notes-Bibliography): ² Immanuel Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, ed. and trans. Paul Guyer and Allen W. Wood (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998), 105.

- Edited Book (Bibliography): Kant, Immanuel. Critique of Pure Reason. Edited and translated by Paul Guyer and Allen W. Wood. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998.

Journal Articles

Citing journal articles accurately is vital for academic research, as they are a cornerstone of scholarly discourse.

- Journal Article (Notes-Bibliography): ³ Michel de Certeau, "The Practice of Everyday Life," Representations 1, no. 1 (1983): 4.
- Journal Article (Bibliography): de Certeau, Michel. "The Practice of Everyday Life." Representations 1, no. 1 (1983): 3-14.
- Journal Article with DOI (Notes-Bibliography): ⁴ Donna Haraway, "A Cyborg Manifesto: Science, Technology, and Socialist-Feminism in the Late Twentieth Century," Simians, Cyborgs, and Women: The Reinvention of Nature (New York: Routledge, 1991), 149, doi:10.1093/0195114906.001.0001.
- Journal Article with DOI (Bibliography): Haraway, Donna. "A Cyborg Manifesto: Science, Technology, and Socialist-Feminism in the Late Twentieth Century." In Simians, Cyborgs, and Women: The Reinvention of Nature, 149-81. New York: Routledge, 1991. doi:10.1093/0195114906.001.0001.

Websites and Online Sources

The dynamic nature of online content requires careful attention to detail when citing.

- Website with Author (Notes-Bibliography): ⁵ Mary Elizabeth Williams, "Can We Talk About the Internet?" Salon, October 25, 2023, <https://www.salon.com/2023/10/25/can-we-talk-about-the-internet/>.
- Website with Author (Bibliography): Williams, Mary Elizabeth. "Can We Talk About the Internet?" Salon, October 25, 2023. <https://www.salon.com/2023/10/25/can-we-talk-about-the-internet/>.
- Website without Author (Notes-Bibliography): ⁶ "The History of the Printing Press," Britannica Online Encyclopedia, accessed October 26, 2023, <https://www.britannica.com/technology/printing-press>.
- Website without Author (Bibliography): "The History of the Printing Press." Britannica Online Encyclopedia. Accessed October 26, 2023. <https://www.britannica.com/technology/printing-press>.

Other Common Sources

Chicago style also covers various other materials that students might use in their research.

- Newspaper Article (Notes-Bibliography): ⁷ John Doe, "Local Council Approves New Park Initiative," Chicago Tribune, October 26, 2023, sec. B.
- Newspaper Article (Bibliography): Doe, John. "Local Council Approves New Park Initiative." Chicago Tribune, October 26, 2023, sec. B.
- Dissertation (Notes-Bibliography): ⁸ Jane Smith, "The Impact of Technology on Higher Education" (PhD diss., University of Chicago, 2022), 75.
- Dissertation (Bibliography): Smith, Jane. "The Impact of Technology on Higher Education." PhD diss., University of Chicago, 2022.

By consulting the official Chicago Manual of Style or reliable online resources based on it, students can find specific formatting guidelines for almost any type of source they encounter in their academic pursuits. Consistent and accurate citation builds credibility and demonstrates respect for the work of others.

FAQ: Chicago Style Student Examples

Q: What is the primary difference between the notes-bibliography system and the author-date system in Chicago style?

A: The primary difference lies in how sources are cited within the text. The notes-bibliography system uses numbered footnotes or endnotes, while the author-date system uses parenthetical citations (author, year, and page number) directly in the text. Both systems require a comprehensive list of sources at the end of the paper.

Q: Which academic disciplines typically use the Chicago Manual of Style?

A: Chicago style is most commonly used in the humanities, such as history, literature, art history, and philosophy, as well as in some social sciences like sociology and anthropology. However, its application can vary based on specific institutional or departmental requirements.

Q: How do I cite a source for the first time versus subsequent times in the notes-bibliography system?

A: The first time a source is cited in a note (footnote or endnote), the citation is complete, including all relevant publication details. For subsequent citations of the same source, a shortened form is used, typically including the author's last name, a shortened title, and the page number.

Q: What is the purpose of the bibliography in the notes-bibliography system?

A: The bibliography serves as an alphabetized list of all sources that have been cited in the notes of the paper. It allows readers to easily locate the full publication information for each source consulted and provides a comprehensive overview of the research undertaken.

Q: When should I include page numbers in the author-date system's in-text citations?

A: Page numbers should always be included in parenthetical citations when you are quoting directly from a source or when you are paraphrasing or summarizing a specific idea or passage that can be precisely located.

Q: How do I cite a website in Chicago style if there is no clear publication date?

A: If a website lacks a publication date, you should use "n.d." (for "no date") in place of the year in both the in-text citation and the reference list entry. Additionally, you should include the access date for the website.

Q: What are the basic formatting requirements for a paper written in Chicago style?

A: Generally, papers in Chicago style should have 1-inch margins, be double-spaced throughout (including the bibliography/reference list), and use a standard 12-point font like Times New Roman or Arial. Page numbers are typically placed in the upper right-hand corner.

Q: How do I format a block quotation in Chicago style?

A: Block quotations, typically those of five or more lines, are formatted by indenting the entire quotation 0.5 inches from the left margin. They should be double-spaced, and the period at the end of the quotation precedes the citation number (for notes-bibliography) or the parenthetical citation (for author-date).

Q: Is it necessary to consult the official Chicago Manual of Style, or are online guides sufficient?

A: While online guides can be helpful for quick references and common examples, the official Chicago Manual of Style is the definitive source. For complex citation questions or to ensure complete accuracy, consulting the latest edition of the manual is highly recommended.
